DIGO BIKAS INSTITUTE

Understanding Climate Finance

All kinds of finance that mentions the word "climate" might not be Climate Finance that the community really needs.

Let's dive into what Climate Finance SHOULD NOT be

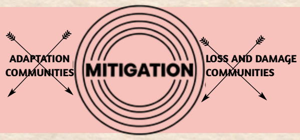
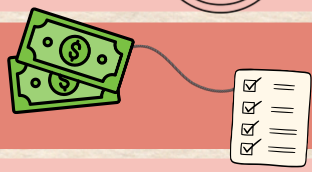
- Repackaged with the same Official Development Assistance (ODA)

- Debt trap in the name of resilience

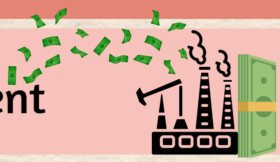
- Mitigation-centric only, which ignores the frontline communities



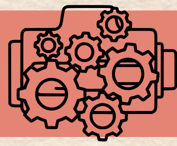
- Conditional, Imposed or donor driven "solutions"



- Fossil fuel supporting investment

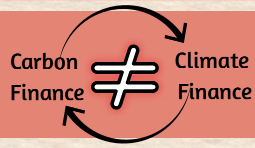


- Slow, bureaucratic, inaccessible and gatekeeping models



- Profit first finance mobilisation

- Interchangeably used as carbon finance and markets.



- Charity and Aid

- Ignore the diverse community, social inequality and structural injustices

Conclusively, Climate Finance must be the provision of new, additional, adequate, predictable, and grant-based financial resources, primarily from the historical high emitters to developing and climate vulnerable countries to support adaptation, mitigation, and loss and damage as an moral obligation rooted in Equity, Human Rights and Justice.

Written By: Susmita Baidawar www.digobikas.org info@digobikas.org digobikasinstitute digobikasinstitute